NEXT MEETING: May 10, 6:30PM
Gonzalo Ruiz-Navarro: RAL Juried Show Walkthrough

Message from the President, Patrick Sieg

Dear Rockville Art League members,

Why do artists create art?

I got some lucky news earlier this month, that one of my paintings sold.

Good for me and the key word in the last sentence is not “sold,” but rather “lucky.”

I shared news of this happy transaction with several artist friends and they offered me their sincere congratulations, a few seemed surprised (the sale or that I sold?) and a few of them mentioned that they wish they could sell their work more often.

(I wonder if my car mechanic ever boasted to his mechanic friends that he had fixed some brakes and the car owner even paid him.)

So if selling a painting is the litmus test for being an artist, then commerce must be the reason we artists create, right?

Because this is the 21st century and since I have a computer, I Googled the question “why do artists create art?” and I reviewed the search results. The reasons most often listed include:

- To evoke emotions and feelings
- To tell a story
- To bring attention and comment on society
- To make people think
- To capture beauty
- To bring happiness
- Because it makes us “human”

I never once saw “to make money” or “build inventory for art sales” as reasons.

Would you still create even if you knew in advance that your art will not sell?

Please don't get me wrong...selling your work is enviable and the support and validation from your customers is wanted and appreciated. And I don't recommend giving your work away (except in certain circumstances that may be the basis for another month's President's message).

But if your main reason for creating is commerce, then I'm sorry.

If I am lucky enough to sell another painting, then I will probably not mention that it sold. But I may report when I have completed a painting and or that it will be in an upcoming show. And if I'm in a particularly sharing mood, then I will say why I enjoyed the creative experience and how it was unique for that work. If, in my opinion, it is a beautiful work, then I will enter it in the Rockville Art League Members' Art Show.

A few other things about art and commerce:

- Did the cave painters in prehistoric times have commerce in mind? Perhaps their work was guaranteed for 10,000+ years but moving the painting would void the warranty.
- Selling to a friend or acquaintance is great and desirable. There is no added lift when a sale is to a "stranger." Your friends are not obligated to buy your work, just think of how many of them haven't, and most are still friends. They want your painting because it is great and they like it.
- I believe we, as artists, should support the work of our fellow artists. I also think that we should be active members of the Rockville Art League and enter the members' art show.
- Art makes great gifts

We had another terrific speaker in our April meeting. Gavin Glakas showed us that it is possible to create a beautiful painting/portrait in 90 minutes. Board member Eric Goss was a perfect model and Gavin may try to hire him in the future.

Our spring 2018 juried art show is upon us. There are more details later in the newsletter including a new art registration process that is online. And there are many volunteer opportunities and I hope you can help. The art drop off date is Monday, April 30 at the Glenview Mansion. The walk-through with judge Gonzalo Ruiz-Navarro will be on Thursday, May 10, and awards will be presented during the walk-through.

The mansion is undergoing renovations beginning in August 2018 and the facility will be closed through January 2019. Our September, October and November meeting will be hosted at the Artist and Makers Studio 2 on Wilkins Avenue in Rockville. Please stay tuned for more details as we get closer.

Thank you for being a RAL member and for being a creative person.

Patrick Sieg
President
